Overview

Attorney Alyson Sneider's practice is focused on appellate law, government representation, administrative law, constitutional and public policy matters, and business litigation.

Alyson is a 2020 graduate (summa cum laude) of Lewis & Clark Law School, where she was an Article Editor of Lewis & Clark Law Review. During law school, Alyson clerked at the Oregon Department of Justice and the Multnomah County Attorney's Office. After law school, Alyson served as a judicial law clerk for the Hon. Robyn Aoyagi at the Oregon Court of Appeals and worked for another Portland law firm.

In her free time, Alyson enjoys solving crossword puzzles, reading fiction and longform journalism, and spending time with her family.

How I Serve Clients

I leverage my background as an appellate clerk, combined with a keen intellect, collaborative ethos, and can-do attitude, to get justice for my clients. I especially enjoy diving deep into the weeds and mastering esoteric legal and factual issues. As a longtime Oregonian, I derive particular satisfaction from helping my government clients attend to various legal matters so that they can focus on best serving our communities.
