

Our Public Entity Litigation Practice

When we say we know government “inside and out,” we mean it literally. For decades, we have represented government entities in litigation, as well as private parties against government entities in litigation. In the process, we have litigated matters of all shapes and sizes, from minor regulatory disputes to complex litigation and appeals with national ramifications. As a result, we have developed a deep understanding of the practical, political, and legal aspects of public entity litigation.

We represent and defend private parties, government bodies, agencies, other public entities, and government officials and employees in a wide variety of matters that include:

- Regulated Industries & Professions
- Public Employment Disputes
- Constitutional matters
- Civil rights and torts claims
- Public Records and Open Meetings
- Procurement and Public Contracting
- Real Property and Development, including Eminent Domain
- Initiatives and Referenda
